Put a Bullet Through Her Brain.

Mrs. Emma J. Parker, wife of Dr. Larkin Parker, of the St. Charles neighborhood, committed suicide last Wednesday. She shot herself through the head while standing in front of a mirror. Dr. Parker was in the room at the time, having just returned from feeding the stock, but was unable to prevent his wife from taking her own life, as he had had no intimation that she intended self destruction. No reason has been assigned as to why she committed the rash deed. She was Dr. Parker's second wife, and had only been married about a year. Mrs. Parker was about 30 years old and was the daughter of Felix Davis, of near Morton's Gap.

Mr. Layne's Heavy Loss.

During the wind storm Friday night a large stable belonging to Mr. Thomas E. Layne, of the Pembroke neighborhood, was blown down, killing a fine young mare, one valuable horse and several calves, besides crippling several other head of stock. The building was a log one with frame sheds built around it, and when it collapsed the animals were crushed and instantly killed. The roof of the building was blown a hundred yards away. Mr. Layne's loss foots up several hundred dollars and he had no insurance of any kind. A good deal of damage was done to fencing in the same neighborhood, and reports from other sections are that considerable damage was done to fencing, fruit trees, etc.

Died in Her Sleep.

Miss Katherine Vaughan was found dead in her bed last Friday morning at her home at Mr. C. W. Vaughan's near Herridon. She was subject to spells of heart trouble, but on the day before was better than usual. When the usual hour for her to arise arrived Friday morning, she was found dead in her bed. She had died in the night of heart failure. She was 65 years of age. The funeral services were held the next day and the interment took place at the graveyard of Mr. R. C. Pace, her brother-in-law.

One to Fight For Cuba.

Messrs Frank Bell, Will Beeler and Will Winfree, Jr., left for the South Saturday telling their friends they were going to New Orleans and thence to Cuba to enter the service of the Cubans in their fight for liberty. Mr. Bell is the well-known newspaper man, lawyer and editor of the Independent; Mr. Beeler has until lately been a commercial traveler and Mr. Winfree is the oldest son of Judge W. P. Winfree. It is not known definitely where they have gone, but it is generally believed that they have gone to fight the Spaniards and to seek their fortunes in the Antilles.

Accident at Hotel Latham.

Engineer M. Miller was on a high step-ladder fixing a chandelier in one of the corridors of Hotel Latham yesterday morning when he slipped and fell. He caught the chandelier and pulled it off in his fall and in some way the gas ignited. It burned fiercely at the ceiling, until the meter could be found and the gas turned off. Mr. Miller's back was badly hurt and he was disabled. Dr. Stites was sent for and an examination showed that his injuries were not serious. The damage was slight.

Breaks His Collar Bone.

A little son of Mr. Howard Duvall, of Laytonville, met with a very painful accident one day last week by jumping out of a hay loft. He fell a distance of 15 feet and broke his collar bone. He received surgical attention at once and at last accounts was getting along as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

JOE WILL WIN.

POOR VOTES FOR HIM SATURDAY AND A STAMPEDE FOLLOWS.

Republicans Forsake Boyle and Promise to Nominate Carlisle—Three Bolters Hold out and Prevent an Election—Weissinger's Sudden Death.

Frankfort, Ky., Mar. 9.—Senator Rozel Weissinger suddenly died this morning and only a formal ballot was taken in the Senatorial race.

Senator Weissinger had been sick for some days, but was not considered dangerously ill. He was one of the four Democrats who still held out against Blackburn Saturday. The vacancy cannot be filled before adjournment and the joint assembly now stands Democrats 67; Republicans 68; Populists 2. With the two Populists, the Democrats can still elect Blackburn, if the three bolters are brought into line.

Frankfort, Ky., March 7.—During the joint session of the General Assembly to-day there were men who would have bet that the election of either John G. Carlisle or J. C. S. Blackburn would take place before adjournment.

There was a stampede and a rally, and during this stormiest scene of the session Mr. St. John Boyle, the Republican nominee, was forgotten completely as if he erstwhile supporters had lost all memory for past events.

The managers of Senator Blackburn felt that they had the prize within their grasp. They had secured the vote of Populist Poor and Edgington; Senator Weissinger was sick in bed and paired with a Boyle voter; the Democrats who had yesterday gone to Mr. Carlisle saw that the votes of all the Democrats present would elect, and before the announcement of the result 18 changed to Blackburn.

The changes came so rapidly and the enthusiasm had grown so intense that the Republicans saw the stampede to Senator Blackburn was almost complete. Messrs. Carroll, Violett and Walker were the only Democrats who had not yet risen to announce a change. Mr. Speight rose over and the situation seemed to tremble in its quick.

Quick and decisive action was necessary and the Republicans knew it. They acted promptly and decisively and Dr. Chambers and Speaker Blanton went to Carlisle, three Democrats follow them, Representative W. H. Lyons, of Newport, a Republican, checked the stampede. The Republican leaders rushed through the throng appealing to their brethren to vote for Carlisle.

"Stand by Walker, Violett and Carroll," they shouted amidst the din, "and we will elect Carlisle and defeat the free silver nominee."

The excitement became intense, Bronston, Henry Martin, Hays, Hardin, Jack Chinn and a dozen other Blackburn workers, hurried from man to man polling their strength, while the Republicans pleaded and begged Violett, Walker and Carroll to stand firm.

"We swear we will stand by you if you will stand firm," shouted Blanton and Jones. Senator William Goebel stood calmly in the center aisle, the calm and self-possessed leader in the House. He smiled on his long arm, leaning enaacted at his very elbows and waited calmly for the storm to subside. His remarkable coolness caused many to remark upon it even at the time.

Fearing that Mr. Lyons might have enough free-silver Republicans to elect Blackburn, the Republican leaders after a hurried conference decided not to run the risk of an attempt to elect Mr. Carlisle until they could hold a caucus and count noses. They called for another ballot, refused to vote, broke a quorum and after a long fight on parliamentary questions succeeded in securing an adjournment, but only by the consent of the Democrats, who had to submit an account of the sudden illness of Senator Ogilvie.

Lyons prevented the attempted fashion of bolters and Republicans in Carlisle, he smiled on his long arm, leaning enaacted at his very elbows and waited calmly for the storm to subside. His remarkable coolness caused many to remark upon it even at the time. Poor brought on the stampede, in which Blackburn came within three votes of election and was kept from being elected by the votes of four Democrats. He arose and said: "There are gentlemen here who have said that they would not vote for the Democratic nominee because he could not be elected. I now remove that excuse by casting my vote for Senator J. C. S. Blackburn."

LUTHER RADFORD GAINS HIS LIBERTY AND IS AT LARGE.

The Slayer of Jake Torian, After Ten Years' Confinement, Outwits the Authorities and Breathes the Air of Freedom.

Feigned Insanity and Escaped From the Lakeland Asylum.

HIS CRIME AND LIFE SENTENCE.

Luther C. Radford, the murderer of Jake Torian, is at large and has fled the country.

This announcement will be received with surprise by the general public, though it has been known for some weeks that such was the case, but only to a comparative few who had received the information in confidence.

The Kentuckian got an inkling of the important news last week and at once wrote to the authorities at the Lakeland Asylum for the facts. To this letter the following reply was received:

Dear Sir: The records of this office show that Luther C. Radford was admitted by order of the Franklin Circuit Court April 27, 1886, and escaped from here Jan. 23, 1896. The Warden of the penitentiary at Frankfort has not heard of Radford's escape. We have not heard any thing from him since he escaped. Very truly,

H. F. McNARY, Supt.

This brief letter tells the facts in a few words, but the story of Radford's crime, confinement and escape is one of unusual interest and is well worth repeating.

On Tuesday evening Dec. 23, 1884, as Jake Torian and Peter Adeock, two young farmers, were sitting by the fire at Mr. Stegar's, near Longview, Ky., they were fired upon from a window and both shot down. Torian lived with Mrs. Stegar, as the manager of her farm, and Adeock was on a visit to him. A pistol ball came crashing through the window pane and Torian jumped to his feet mortally hurt and fell dead in his tracks. Adeock, shot in the arm, sprang up and attempted to leave the room by a rear door but three shots were fired at him in rapid succession. As he put his right hand on the door knob he found it disabled. He changed hands and opened the door and escaped, but while striking the door facing by his side. Adeock recovered, but still carries the bullet in his shoulder.

Radford when he had learned that Adeock would recover, began to build an alibi, and told conflicting stories that at once attracted suspicion to him. He and Torian were suitors for the hand of the young lady and her recent preference for Torian had greatly exasperated Radford. He was known to be bitter in his feelings towards Torian, who was not known to have any other enemy. Torian's relatives began to do some clever detective work and soon had a complete chain of circumstantial evidence wound around Radford. Fearing that Radford would escape, they arrested him without a warrant.

The arrest was made by Byron Torian, brother of the murdered man, Jacob Torian, Sr., and Jacob H. Pattillo. They found him at a neighbor's, covered him with their revolvers and he surrendered at once, exclaiming, "I know what it is for but I am innocent." They might have lynched him then and there, but the Torians and their friends were law abiding citizens and they brought their prisoner to Hopkinsville, swore out a warrant and lodged him in jail on Saturday, Dec. 27, 3 days after the killing. Radford had actually served on the jury at the inquest and attended the funeral and burial of his victim, hoping to avert the suspicion that he feared would lead to his arrest. But though he was ignorant of that fact, he was even then under close watch, and his nervous actions and overdone grief were circumstances in the chain of evidence the detectives were gathering against him.

Radford belonged to a prominent family and his trial was the most noted ever held in the county. He was indicted for willful murder in March and his trial came off in September 1885. It occupied a week and the array of counsel was so formidable that the speeches occupied 18 hours. Radford was then about 30 years of age and was a constable of his district when the crime occurred. He was a good looking young fellow, exceedingly shrewd and had hitherto borne a good character. His friends rallied his defense and he had able and eloquent lawyers to represent him. The prosecution also was equally strong. The prisoner strenuously asserted his innocence and continues till this good day to do so. He entered a plea of not guilty and the following jury was empanelled:

J. J. Smith, W. T. Vaughan, Davis Wilkins, Shaw Gamble, J. E. Johnson, Jas. Anderson, Martin Moore, O. B. Griffin, Jno. W. Courtney, H. H. Lindsey, Nelson Cross, col., and Robt. Jones, col.

There were numerous witnesses and the defense fought so desperately for the prisoner's acquittal that a mistrial was generally expected. Messrs. A. H. Clark, C. H. Bush, G. A. Champlin, Jno. W. McArthur and Fenton Sims spoke for the defense and Jno. W. Payne, W. R. Garrett, R. W. Henry and Jas. B. Gentry spoke for the prosecution. The jury took the case Saturday afternoon, Sept. 26, and in fifteen minutes returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the punishment at life imprisonment. The usual attempts to get another trial were resorted to, but Judge Radford refused to reopen the case and the punishment at life imprisonment was pronounced at Frankfort to serve out his sentence, bitterly denouncing those who had been instrumental in convicting him and declaring that he was absolutely innocent.

His record in the state prison was bad from the first. He was vicious, insubordinate and troublesome. He soon came to be regarded as one of the worst, most desperate and most dangerous men in the penitentiary. He was frequently punished with the lash and in other ways, for flagrant violation of the prison rules. The one absorbing idea with him seemed to be to get out. He made numerous attempts to escape, but never succeeded. His record was such that there was no hope of pardon and there appeared to be no unity whatever that he would ever breathe the air of liberty.

Years passed away and his fertile brain finally hit upon a plan that in time took definite shape. Gradually he changed his whole line of conduct. He became by degrees quiet and tractable and his obedience to prison rules soon worked a big change in the treatment he received. In course of time he became so quiet and docile that he was often moodily and melancholy. He gave himself up to grief and dejection and he grew worse as the years passed away until in the spring of 1895 his mind gave way (in the opinion of his custodians) and as his part was played for a purpose and played with all the shrewdness of a desperate prisoner longing for liberty, his project was crowned with success. A jury was empanelled, he was tried for insanity and committed to the asylum after nine years and seven months' confinement in the penitentiary.

He was taken to Lakeland and quietly and patiently continued to act his part. He took his time and watched for an opportunity. Harmless parties were story-told confined in the State asylums and it is not a difficult matter for a man playing the part that Radford was to get away from his keepers. He was in the Lakeland nine months and then quietly took his departure one night in January, six weeks ago.

The rest of the story is a fact, from Radford's own lips, based on information furnished by those who saw him while in the asylum.

He walked from Lakeland to Beverly in this county, a distance of 200

COLLEGE FROLICS.

The Victim of One Initiation Takes the Affair Quite Coolly.

"When I was at Cornell a dozen years ago," said a Cornell man to a Star reporter, "we used to have great times."

"Which are not entirely discontinued," interrupted the reporter.

"I suppose not," he went on. "Boys will be boys, and students will be something worse. I know we were. We had one fellow, though, a chap who is now earning a salary of $15,000 a year, while his father receives the largest salary of any man in the United States. We had a society in which the initiation ceremonies were something frightful, including, among other pleasing features, a coffin, in which the initiate was buried. That is, we put him in it, and nailed on the lid (there were air holes in it that he did not know about), and then with ropes we let him down through the floor to the next floor, where we had a pile of ashes, which were shoveled onto the coffin in a way which was really blood-curling to the man inside."

"Well, this chap I am telling about was to be initiated, but when the time came, which was Saturday night, he was what he was every Sunday night, so that he couldn't come, to the scratch. We looked for him, but failed to find him, and the opportunity passed, but not for long. About one o'clock in the morning he was seen reeling up stairs to his room, and in the morning he was seen carrying the coffin along. He was so full that he didn't know anything, and by the time we got into his room, after giving him what we thought was time to get into bed, he was sound asleep."

"We weren't very particular how much noise we made, and after knocking things around pretty lively, we had set the coffin upon some chairs, and then lifted him out of bed and laid him in it, putting in a blanket to make it easier on him. Then we withdrew to think over what he would think when he waked up in the morning and found where he was. I guess, I must have been more curious on the point than the others, for as soon as I got up I slipped over to his room to get a place to watch him when he came to himself. I didn't want to disturb him while I was waiting, and I opened his door very carefully, and poked my head in, and the sight I beheld almost paralyzed me."

"His hair turned white in a single night," interrupted the reporter, with more or less of horror.

"Not in the slightest," continued the Cornell man. "He was sitting up in the coffin, as comfortable as you please, smoking a cigarette and reading a Sunday paper."

"Of course," he concluded, "it was no matter than on him, but he explained that during the night he had horrible dreams of being put in a coffin and buried, and he had some sort of an idea that he might be dead, but when he woke up he tumbled to the situation at once, and knew that some of the gang would be in to see about it, so he sent out for a morning paper, kindled a cigarette and was ready for visitors."—Washington Star.

A FUNNY SIGHT.

A South Sea Islander's First Experience with Ice.

"One of the funniest sights I ever saw was a South Sea Islander with his first chunk of ice," remarked the captain of a trading schooner. "I was lying at anchor at one of the Navigator Islands once when some natives came aboard. It was an awfully hot day, and I had just been getting some ice up from below. The natives looked at it curiously, and I handed them a chunk. The moment it touched his hand he dropped it like a hot shov and looked at his palms to see if they were burned."

"After a deal of jabbering they all sat around it and walked it round. They couldn't understand it at all, and when there was nothing left but a wet spot on the deck, they sat around it and discussed the phenomena."

"I put a piece of ice in my mouth and then gave them some. They shifted it from hand to hand like a hot coal, put the tips of their tongues on it gingerly and finally swallowed the chunk. It was a source of great wonder to them."

Independent as a Hog.

W. H. Miller, a minor living on Soldier Creek, in Oregon, is an extremely independent man. He owns a rich ledge, from which he can easily get ten or twelve dollars worth of ore every day, and has plenty of time to sit around and talk about Venezuela and the tariff. He could sell his property for a large sum, but he declines all offers. He lives all alone, and his wants are few. "The ledge will stay there," he says. "I own it. I'm as independent as a hog on ice and I'm happy and contented to stay just as I am."

WILKES BOOTH'S DOUBLE.

Remarkable Photograph on the Walls of the Old Monumental Church.

In the old Monumental Church, at Richmond, Va., which is one of the most remarkable houses of worship in America, there is a romantic object of the shape of a photograph of Wilkes Booth's double. It hangs in a dark corner of the old-fashioned vestry room and represents a man in the prime of life standing beside a table, his long clerical garments giving him increased height and dignity. The long, straight hair is brushed straight back from the high, broad forehead, and the face—in every lineament—is said to be the image of Wilkes Booth as he would have appeared at that time. The resemblance is certainly remarkable—the deep, black eyes, the shape of the chin, mouth, cheeks, forehead, eyebrows and nose—and moreover there is a subtle similarity of expression to members of the Booth family that defies description.

This man was Rev. John G. Armstrong, pastor of the church from 1878 to 1884. But even to this day strange rumors of the final end of Wilkes Booth are to be heard in places where his friends and intimates lived and talked long after the assassination of President Lincoln had passed into history. There are tales of a mysterious grave, of a body that tallied in some of its marks with those of Wilkes Booth and differed materially in others, and an intangible fabric of supposition built upon a series of gossiped incidents. However valuable these may be historically, they show an undercurrent that found an outbreak in the romance of Mr. Armstrong, of the Monumental church.

The likeness of Mr. Armstrong to Wilkes Booth was so startling that some people who had seen both men found it hard to believe that they were not the same. The preacher's manner might have called for dramatic movements and gestures had the repose and breadth that most actors require in following their art and living and working constantly before an audience. He was, moreover, slightly lame, as Wilkes Booth would probably have been in consequence of the injury to his leg sustained in jumping from President Lincoln's box. Aside from this fact, Mr. Armstrong's manner, voice and intonation led to the conviction that he was not a priest he would have been a great actor. It is said that his daughter did subsequently go into the stage and met with great success.

No subject of discussion was more constant in Richmond than the possibility that Mr. Armstrong and Wilkes Booth were one and the same man. Mr. Armstrong strenuously denied the identity, but his dramatic could not silence the rumors. There seemed, moreover, to be a shadow over his antecedents. He came to Richmond a comparative stranger and claimed that he was a priest ordained in Ireland. An investigation was quickly started to clear up the facts as to his past, but he gave entire satisfaction. In the midst of the constantly reiterated declarations and denials of the clergyman had accused of irregularities in his habits, and this again called forth the charge that he was not what he seemed to be. He finally resigned the rectorship of Monumental church and went to a city in the extreme south. Shortly after he left the ministry, he sank out of sight and died in obscurity. But even to the end the doubt as to his identity hung like a shadow over his life, and when on his deathbed, his last words were a denial—a pathetic, heart-broken denial that he was Wilkes Booth.

The picture hanging in the vestry room of Monumental church is said to be the only one in existence of this strange man. The shadows that surround it screen the counterfeits features from even the glance of a casual visitor. But whoever climbs up and gazes into those eyes sees a human countenance so pregnant of possibilities that its very romance robs the place of its reality. Near by the altar lies enshrouded in its solemn hush. The church, even in its silence, seems alive with whispers, as each sound, however slight, is echoed and re-echoed, haunted dome—Philadelphia Times.

Told for a True Story.

The other day an elderly lady with an umbrella stood on the sidewalk on Washington street, vainly trying to stop a southbound car. A white car came along, and the woman brandished her umbrella and called out:

"Here! Stop! You stop!"

The motorman slowed up a little and called out:

"We can't carry you—this is a mail car."

"Well," screamed the old lady from the pavement, "can't a female ride on it?"—Boston Transcript.

THE EVENING HOUSES.

Pleasant Way in Which to Pass Them About the Fireside.

There are many little items that go to make up pleasant evening entertainments for young people. The old-fashioned candy-pull, apple-pulling, spelling match, and singing school seem to have passed out of existence as regular entertainments. Of these we have left but the spelling contest, which is so revamped and transformed that we scarcely recognize in it the old custom of a quarter of a century ago. Games of forfeits are less popular than they used to be; and as there are still many people who disapprove of dancing, something must be invented to pass away the time.

Somebody has devised a bit of entertainment in the way of a marshmallow party. The guests to be are preferably few, only so many as can sit around an open grate being considered the proper thing. To be sure, a friend or two may sit a little way back and be served with the dainties as they are prepared.

A bright fire of coals in an open grate or fireplace is the first necessity. A dish of marshmallows is provided and a number of long, slender sticks. The friends gather about the fire and thrust the sticks into the snowy blocks and hold them over the coals until they become of a light-brown color. They may be eaten hot or placed on dishes to be served later. To satisfy the appetite and make the food delightfully creepy, the lights are turned down, and the members of the party relate the most blood-curdling of ghost stories. The one that tells the most harrowing story and the most successful toaster of marshmallows gets the prize. For the worst story and the most mistakes in burning the candies, dropping them in the ashes and otherwise misusing them, there is a "bungler's prize." If there are youngsters among the party, they may be made to bring like a picture in caricature, a shoe-sole, or some comic verse written on it, or a paper bag made in the shape of a stocking and filled with small potatoes. The first prize may be any pretty or dainty object, from a Japanese napkin to a bit of cut glass. The mistress provides aprons or large napkins to cover the dresses, and a rug or piece of crash is laid down before the grate, especially if there are youngsters among the party, to be sure. A little afternoon tea table is placed to hold the dish of candies, and there is a large plate for the sticks. At one of these parties the argument was closed by the company reciting, in unison, a popular poem. The ingenuity of the hostess and her friends can suggest many variations on this plan, and additions in the way of readings, songs or stercorion views are always welcome.—N. Y. Ledger.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

A Man Saves the Baby and Marries the Woman.

A romantic marriage occurred in Atlanta, the parties to it being Mr. H. F. Bailey, of Jackson, Miss., and Miss Hodges, of Virginia. Mr. Bailey is somewhat past 50 years of age, and the bride is about 30. The couple first met during the war, when Miss Hodges was a baby. She happened when the northern soldiers approached Jackson, Miss. The parents of Miss Hodges resided there at that time, and when the grand rush to avoid the Yankees was made Mr. Bailey, then a Confederate soldier, secured a wagon and moved the Hodges family. In the hurry and excitement the little girl was forgotten, and she was not missed until the family had gone several miles.

Mr. Bailey volunteered to go back and find her, which he did. The child was found in the road near her home crying. Mr. Bailey carried her to her parents.

Soon after that Mr. Hodges moved with his family to Virginia, and Mr. Bailey saw them no more for 30 years.

Last year his wife died, and it occurred to him to look up his old friends and see what had become of the little girl whom he had saved from the invaders in the long ago. He went to Virginia and found her teaching school. They corresponded and agreed to meet at Atlanta during the fall and be married.

Wasn't Prepared to Answer.

The Boston Home Journal says that a very devout gentleman of that city, who teaches a Sunday school, and who has bootbacks and newboys, recently undertook to tell the story of Jacob's ladder. After he had graphically pictured the wanderings of the patriarch, his dream in the eastern meadows, and the ladder on which the angels were ascending and descending, he paused and said: "Now, boys, if there is anything in this story that I have not yet explained, you may ask me any question you like and I will answer it." Thereupon a little chap cried out: "Say, Mister Minister, did you say dem angels had wings?" "Yes, my boy," replied the doctor. "Yes, they were angels." "Well, then, if they had wings, what did they need ladders?"

"Big as a Barn Door."

COMPARISON OF FOODS.

Prof. Atwater's Experiments Put Cornmeal at the Head.

Prof. Atwater's experiments and studies and experiments in this line have led him to the conclusion that the greatest nutritive value in any kind of food of the same specific cost is to be found in cornmeal. He finds that in one pound of the latter there are slightly over eight pounds of actual nutriment; in eight and one-third pounds of wheat there are over six and three-quarter pounds of nutriment; in four pounds of the latter there are three and a half pounds of nutriment; in five pounds of beans there are four pounds of nutriment; in twenty pounds of potatoes there are three and three-quarter pounds of nutriment; in twentysix cents worth of fat salt pork there are three and a half pounds of nutriment; in the same value of wheat bread there are two and a quarter pounds; in the same of beef one and three-quarters pounds; in skim-milk cheese the same as the latter; in whole-milk cheese a trifle more than one and a half pounds; in smoked ham and legs of mutton about the same; in eggs about the same; in walnuts about three ounces, and in oysters at thirty-five cents a quart about three ounces. This table will be found of value to those who wish to combine economy with nutritive possibilities in their selection of foods.—N. Y. Tribune.

Tit for Tat.

Mr. Way, a minister, was called to officiate at a colored wedding. He was fond of a joke and thought to get up a laugh at the bridegroom's expense. Guests, white and colored, were present. After the ceremony Mr. Way said to the bridegroom: "My Johnson, I think you ought to think, on such occasions as this for the minister to kiss the bride, but we will omit that little form on this occasion." Of course the company indulged in a laugh. After a little time the bride turned to her husband, the minister, and said: "Mr. Way, I think it is customary on such occasions as this for the bridegroom to hand the minister officiating a twenty-five cent bill for his necessities while he is on this occasion."—"Ram's Horn."

An Awful Record.

An old man in England was sent to prison for four months for petty stealing whose record, the judge who sentenced him said, "is one of the most awful pieces of reading that has ever come to my notice." In 1863 he was sent to jail for three years for stealing two tame rabbits; he then got seven years for stealing five shillings and a shawl; then ten years, with seven years' police supervision, for stealing three ducks, and finally consecutive sentences of five years each on three charges of stealing a coat, a pair of reins and a shovel, with another year's police supervision. In all, 35 years of penal servitude for six thefts of objects whose value amounted to a few dollars.

Countess in a Lion's Den.

A French countess, who has gone into the lion taming business, was attacked during a recent exhibition by one of its lions. She was nearly killed, but she managed to escape, and succeeded in beating the lion off and made him go through his usual performance before leaving the cage. Her injuries were severe.

Population of Boston.

The recent census of Boston gives that city a population of 490,920.

—The valuation of the City of Little Rock is $11,000,000, and the debt of the city is only $224,150.

THE OBECRODILE

A Few of Its Peculiar Ways of Transacting Business.

There is little in the animal kingdom that can look so dead and be so much alive as a crocodile. The number of crocodiles in the Nile has probably taken him for a log and have failed to discover their mistake until it was too late to be of any benefit to them will never be known.

In ancient times, several years prior to the British occupation of Egypt, some of the people of that country worshipped the crocodile as a god, there being nothing else like him. They fed him on dainties, and tagged him with gold jewelry. In other parts of Egypt, however, the natives looked upon him as a devil. Having no firearms, they did not kill him, but lead, but they managed to immobilize him with jewelry. In such weapons as were fashionable at this time.

The crocodile is not so numerous as the Nile as he was in the days of the Pharaohs. Some of the factors rather show the river now below the second cataract on account of the annoyances inseparable from tourism. It seems impossible for him to be so numerous as he was, but trying to play him with a revolver and to a reptile that is fond of a quick life this sort of thing is simply unfeasible. He will not molest a man, but he will take him by surprise. He has the advantage, and so long as a man does not unthinkingly step on him the crocodile will go his way and calmly await his opportunity.

He feeds on fish, but for a course of time he would rather have man. If, black preferred, which shows there is no accounting for taste even among reptiles. His methods for capturing large game are plural. He lies in single file, and crocodiles with sand or mud, until an absent-minded native wanders within reach. Having grabbed his prey, he reaches into the water and there he struggles with the crocodile. He drag his victim ashore and bury him in sand or mud, and wait for days before he gorges himself.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE BLACK VICTORIA.

Queen Mabisa, Wife of the Lord of the Khamas' Country.

The South African imbroglio, says the New York Mail and Express, brings up an extraordinary character in that part of the world. This is the queen of the Khamas, the lord of the Khamas' country. It is a rich populous land, and prospered greatly under its sovereigns. The queen is about 40, of medium height, greenish, tall, and of slight build, and as black as a coal. She dresses in black silk in the simplest London style, and uses almost no finery. She is a devout Christian and a prohibitionist. She treats drunkenness as a crime, and she is very strict against the seller than the tippler. She spends nearly all her revenue to charity of some sort. She is a liberal patron of churches, Sunday schools, and day schools, and needle work clubs. She entertains generously and is particularly kind to the wives of explorers and settlers. By many of the Afrianders she is called "the Blackest Queen." The King and his subjects, her people are keeping aloof from both sides and are praying that peace will be restored.

Concentrated Fuel.

A French naval engineer named d'Humy has invented a pressed, oil cake for use as fuel on ocean steamers. It is not affected by temperature, is smokeless and odorless, cannot evaporate or cause explosions and is very easy to handle, giving out intense heat and leaving only two to three per cent. of ash. A ton of this fuel is equal to 30 tons of coal and costs between five and ten dollars.

"If the half of this story is true," says the Cincinnati Price Current, "and M. d'Humy really has got a substitute for coal which is less dirty, bulky and costly, while equally safe and powerful, he has opened the door to all sorts of marine possibilities. But discoveries of this kind have been made on paper a good many times before and it will be well to await results before getting too enthusiastic."—Detroit Evening News.

Not Always a Blessing.

Irate Uncle—Gallagher, I told you all along that education'd prove yer-cur-se, an' I am not a bit surprised at yer bet here. If yer ever never learnt to write yer own name, been arrested for forgery. Look at me, with no education at all, can't even scarcely write me name, and here I am, the greatest poll-tice justice. Yer could have done the same, but no! Yer must have an education. Gallagher, I'm ashamed of you!—Life.

This ratio of sixteen grains of silver to one of gold has been the standard of equality between the two metals since their first use as money by the United States.

There exists no necessity to change that ratio more than to change the length of a yard stick, or the number of ounces in a pound weight.

The ever basic trust of Americans is constantly at work hatching new schemes for enrichment of their wealth and to rob producers of wealth.

Wages making power is belied, corruption in high places of trust and honor exists, and the evil times prophesied by the prophet Abraham Lincoln, now manifest the very existence of our country as a power among the nations of the world. All made possible through parties and politicians.

The Cincinnati Enquirer is earnestly engaged in the noble and patriotic effort to make known the truth and facts, expose political crimes and criminals, and to show the cause and effect the unwarranted interference with the people's money and productive industry.

With every cash subscriber to the Kentuckian for one year, we give a Year's sub-

The friends of the young ladies, and of the school are very cordially invited to be present.

The gross earnings of the L. & N.
during the fourth week of February,
from freight, passenger and miscellaneous sources, amounted to $418, 388, same period last year, $387,654.
During a similar period in '94 the amount was $367,197.

Dave Halliburton, charged with an assault, kill his son-in-law, who eloped with Halliburton's daughter last summer, was acquitted in Clarksville Friday.

The Leavelle homestead has been subdivided into a number of splendid residence lots which are for sale on easy terms. Apply to Henry &
L. Leavelle.

Mr. Fred D. Losey's impersonation of the character "Fagin" the Jew, the sly, crafty and most repulsive of all swindlers and thieves, was worth the price of admission.

The young people of the Beverly vicinity had a pleasant entertainment at Mr. R. E. Coleman's Friday evening, which was given in honor of the Beverly Band. About fifteen couples were present.

Don't miss an opportunity of hearing
Mr. Fred D. Losey at the tabernacle to night. His interpretation of the quaint characters in Dickens' periodical story, "Oliver Twist" are vivid, striking and impressive.

The heavy rains of Thursday and Friday were followed by a drop of 20 degrees in the temperature and a beautiful bright day Saturday.
The roads are almost without bottom and there could be no better time to start the agitation of the free turnpike question.

Mr. Geo. A. Clark, of the A. Clark merchant tailoring establishment, has just received a full line of spring suitings, which are now ready for inspection. The house has enjoyed a heavy trade since its opening and now that new goods have arrived, which he develops the moral aims of the business. Mr. Clark, a well known cutter, has charge of the business, and will see to it that "all are suited."

The rapidity with which Mr. Losey passes from one character to another without the aid of stage accessories, the power which he possesses to touch the emotions of humor and pathos; the force and clearness with which he develops the moral aims of the great Author Dickens stamp him as one of the greatest portrayals of characters on the platform. Get a good seat reserved so you can see to an advantage his wonderful faculty of impersonation. Tickets on sale at Elgin's.

The Meaning of Words....

DEPENDS on where you hear them and what there is to back them up.
We handle words very carefully: We know what our printed statements mean and we are ready to stand or fall by their downright truthfulness. Ours is a good stock and a nice store and we hope it will be bigger and better as the years go on. We shall do the best we can to make it so. If we make a mistake now and then be sure it is a mistake and we are ready to right it with good stationery, or with money.
No customer of ours shall suffer from our error! If you do not know us, here is an excellent opportunity to begin.

J. H. Kugler.
